Key Takeaways from the Pilot

- Teacher involvement and engagement was critical
- Connections with outside organizations led to increased meaning for students
- Successful in districts of all types
- Almost 8,000 students are candidates

Students were able to research an area of interest (often aligned to their own passions) in an effort to engage in solutionary work, and take informed action. Within this work we are focusing on fostering a skill set in students that transcends curriculum, that will help students better navigate their world outside of the confines of their K-12 school experience.

- Mitchell Bickman, K-12 Director of Social Studies, Oceanside HS
